The News Review

By BRUCE CATTON

WITH Engineer Morris L. Cooke of Philadelphia announcing that we have only about 100 years of "virile national existence" left to us unless we do something drastic to stop soil erosion, it begins to look as if there really was a fire behind all the smoke of those dust storms.

Southern Pine for Newsprint Urged Upon Publishers

Dr. Charles Herty Outlines Advantages to Spa Convention

MILL IN ALABAMA

Southern Publishers Association Reports Important Industrial Advance

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—If members of the Southern Newspaper Publishers association had any doubt as to the supply of Southern pine that could be used in the manufacture of newsprint and other paper products, misgivings were dispelled at Tuesday's session of that organization.

Dr. Charles H. Herty, director of the pulp and paper laboratory of the Industrial Committee at Savannah, Ga., who has been making a special study, investigation and experiments in connection with the movement to establish a newsprint mill in the South, pointed a most rosy picture for the publishers.

Dr. Herty might be termed the "miracle man" of the present aggressive movement to bring the newsprint industry to the South. He assured the delegates that a fine quality of newsprint, stationery, envelopes and other articles allied with paper products could be manufactured from pine grown in the Southern states. He placed the finished articles before the convention.

Publishers Impressed
Dr. Herty spoke extemporaneously. His sincerity and enthusiasm were commented on by many delegates. He took the publishers on a trip through various sections of the South, where an inexhaustible supply of pine trees is growing. He guided them through the laboratory that he directs. He told how the various products were being manufactured, and of the tests that had been made. He told of Northern mills which would have influence in connection with the furthering of the newsprint project, who skeptical at first of the amount of pine in the Southern states and also seriously doubting the quality of products manufactured from it, came South to investigate and returned convinced that a new and most prosperous era was ahead for that section of the nation.

Link Other Industries

Tracing the value of such an industry, Dr. Herty linked it up with other undertakings, each of which, he pointed out, would yield immense financial return to the South. He recalled a small farm in a Southern state on which an acre had been set aside for experimental purposes. Pine seedlings had been sown on that acre and the trees grew six feet in a year. Between the trees food products were planted and gave a substantial return. The value of special value to livestock also was shown in that area and a cowman a dairy permitted to graze on it. It was a miniature "Garden of Eden." Later the pine trees would be tapped for their turpentine, and then, when the newsprint mill is a reality, the owner will realize a revenue from the sale of the pine. Every other tree will be taken out. What can be done on small scale, Dr. Herty said, can

Special Session of Council Is Called

Salaries of Score City Employees to Be Fixed Thursday

May Effect Police Force, Firemen and Other Employees

TO OUTLINE BUDGET

Drastic Ordinance Against Peddlers Is Passed Tuesday Night

Although salaries of two municipal employees were raised and lowered Tuesday night at city council meeting, a special session was called for Thursday night by Mayor Albert Graves to consider fixing of salaries of all city employees except those elected.

Salaries of elected officials are fixed by ordinance.

The council Tuesday night hiked the salary of John Owens, employee of water and light plant, to $125 per month. She formerly received $120.

The council lowered the monthly salary of Mrs. Frank Hicks, bookkeeper, to $100. She formerly received $125.

In a talk before the council, Alderman Carter Johnson urged that compensation of water and light plant employees remain the same, but pointed out that Owens was justified in a salary hike. Mr. Johnson referred to improvements made at the municipal plant by Owens which Johnson said saved the city a considerable sum of money.

Fixing of salaries Thursday night may effect five policemen, 15 firemen, four members of the street department and other employees. Fixing of salaries was seen as a financial survey before the council outlines its annual budget.

Ordinance Against Peddlers
A drastic ordinance was passed Tuesday night striking at peddlers of merchandise, fruit, patent medicines, toilet preparations, cosmetics and many other items. The ordinance appears in another column of this issue.

The council passed the ordinance on a petition signed by 58 merchants, citizens and property owners of Hope. Frank Ward and Paul Briant, druggists, appeared before the council and pointed out the necessity of such an ordinance, which was later presented by the petitioner's attorney, John Vesey.

Dr. J. H. Weaver filed a report in which he urged that action be taken against open toilets within the city limits. The report also asked that a vigorous campaign against mosquitoes be pushed.

An ordinance was enacted reducing the city treasurer's bond to $5,000 from $10,000.

A motion was carried that members of the Board of Public Affairs may serve without filing bond. A bond of $500 for each member was previously required.

Cotton Estimate Figure Revised

Production of 1934 Crop Is Placed at 9,636,000 Bales

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Revised estimates of the 1934 cotton crop was announced Wednesday by the Department of Agriculture, placing production at 9,636,000 of 500-pound short weight.

This figure compares with 13,047,000 bales of 1933.

The area of cotton in cultivation July 1 of last year was 27,883,000 acres, the revised estimate said.

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

—BY RODNEY DUTCHER—

WASHINGTON.—The fight over the banking act of 1933, like that over most of the other proposals on President Roosevelt's "must" program, centers on a New Deal demand for greater public control in the American economic system.

Mr. Roosevelt and Gov. Murrin S. Easley of the Federal Reserve Board says, in effect: "We cannot afford to trust private bankers any more with the management of our national credit and financial policies."

The bankers reply: "We cannot afford to trust the politicians."

The house already has passed the bill, on the theory that it is safer to trust a governmental agency, representing—and accountable to—the people, than the bankers, representing—and accountable to—themselves.

The Senate Banking Committee is now considering the bill, plus certain amendments urged by Easley which it probably will adopt.

The administration stops well short

Fewer But Better Marriages Is Goal For Uniform Martial and Divorce Laws

U.S. Movement for Difficult Marriages and Easier Divorces

Reform League Would Require Marriage License 2 Weeks in Advance

A PHYSICAL "EXAM"

Divorces Up 2,000 Per Cent Is Latest Government Report

A 1935 view of the ever-present marriage-and-divorce question is provided by the following article, the last of six surveying "The Marriage Scene."

By Mary Margaret McBride
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK.—Government statistics report that a temporary sloughing off during the worst of the depression

And now comes a nation-wide movement backed by many women's organizations to push a uniform marriage-and-divorce law for all the forty-eight states that would make marriage more difficult and divorce easier.

Fewer marriages and better ones will automatically decrease divorces, advocates of the plan claim. The idea, they say, is that when a couple reach the divorce court, the damage has already been done and their marriage is by that time non-existent. There is then no point in keeping them legally tied when in reality they are already un-married, agitators for the new law claim.

The League Reform League here has worked out provisions for a law that would forbid the ceremony unless the couple wishing to be married could show a license which had been applied for at least two weeks before the ceremony.

Also, application would have to be posted in the county clerk's office and published. This would do away with spur-of-the-moment weddings, thought up by helpful friends on a party, and done on a dare without any sober thought of the long years ahead.

Physical Test Insisted Upon
The League law would also insist upon rigid physical examinations of both persons and would prohibit the marriage of those afflicted with tuberculosis, venereal disease and epilepsy. It would not permit paupers to wed, either.

And a marriage which was legal in the state where it was contracted would be legal in all states. As it is now, a couple who could not marry in New York find it possible to go somewhere else and have the ceremony performed with complete benefit of clergy and the law.

Grace Morrison Poole, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, declares that the Federation still stands back of a resolution passed in 1925 calling for uniform marriage and divorce laws. Although the Federation has not formulated any definite provisions, Mrs. Poole feels certain that the next few years will see much activity and pressure brought to bear upon the question.

Parker Is Denied Directed Verdict

Crosnoe on Stand, Said He Was Offered $300 to Burn Cotton Gin

WARREN, Ark.—(AP)—W. C. Parker was denied a motion for a directed verdict Wednesday after testimony by J. A. Lee, the plaintiff, was completed in his $12,500 suit against Parker of the Continental Gin company and four others in connection with the burning of the gin last spring.

The Continental Gin company also asked a directed verdict although the court did not decide on the motion immediately. Lee, asking for $12,500 damages, alleged that the company entered into conspiracy with the defendants to burn the gin.

Charles Crosnoe, Jesse Hutson, Thomas Crawford and Ben F. Wilson were the others named in the suit.

Crosnoe, under a six-year sentence for burning the gin, testified that Wilson offered him $300 to burn it. Crosnoe said that he hired Hutson to do the work and that Chris Wheaton, negro, fired the gin.

Crosnoe said that a few days after the fire he demanded money from Wilson and that he was told to go to Dallas, where he testified he interviewed an official of the gin company.

Crosnoe said that he was told to "rest easy" and that the matter would be taken care of.

Statements made by Parker and Wilson here Wednesday denied any connection with the burning of the gin.

Coach Ray Morrison Reported Seriously Ill

DALLAS, Texas.—(AP)—Ray Morrison, developer of the spectacular forward passing attack that made Southern Methodist University football teams famous, was under treatment in a hospital here Wednesday for a sudden serious illness.

His physician said a few hours after he was stricken that the exact nature of the ailment had not been determined, but added that his condition was considerably improved.

Morrison left SMU a few months ago to become head football coach at his alma mater, Vanderbilt University, at Nashville, Tenn. He returned here May 1 after putting his new charges through six weeks of spring drill.

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The State Penal Board is again considering plans to have convicts manufacture automobile license plates and highway signs. Chairman Walter Helms has advertised for bids for stamping machinery. The matter will probably come before the penal board at its June meeting.

TEXARKANA.—A jury in federal District Court here Tuesday found Joe B. Ingram and J. Harold Blakely, Nevada county farmers guilty of conspiracy to defraud the government on cotton acreage contracts. Sentence was deferred until Friday. They were charged with submitting false reports on cotton acreage destroyed and with obtaining more than their share of benefit payments.

W. O. Ingram, John C. Ingram and Young Haynie, indicted jointly with them, were acquitted.

Cecil Rachel of Texarkana, who recently completed a term in Leavenworth for violation of the liquor law, was jailed to await trial on charge of violating the Dyer motor vehicle theft act, after he was surrendered by bondsmen.

Rachel also was under $5,000 bond in Bowie county, Texas, District Court at Boston, in connection with robbery of the White House cafe, near Union Station here, about three months ago, and that bond was forfeited when he failed to appear at Boston.

Massey Holt in connection with the cafe hold-up, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 10 years each in the Texas penitentiary.

Red River Reaches 32.2 Ft. Wednesday

FERA Workers Continue to Bolster Levees in Danger Zones

Red river at Fulton Wednesday morning had reached a stage of 32.2 feet as hundreds of relief workers continued to re-enforce levees from Fulton as far south as Garland City.

The river is expected to climb to 35 feet by next Monday before reaching its crest, J. W. Cronk of the United States weather bureau, has forecast.

Another foot of water would virtually cut off traffic on Highway 53 from Fulton to McNab. Water had covered the road in some places Wednesday, but traffic was still moving through.

Denies Gasoline Taken From Plane

Fayetteville Airport Caretaker Says He Guarded Ship

FAYETTEVILLE.—Charles Willoughby, Jr., caretaker of the Fayetteville airport Tuesday insisted that gasoline was not stolen from the plane piloted here last week-end from Chicago by Byrnes Walker. The plane crashed Monday near Lowell, and Walker said at the time that the fuel tank gauge had been tampered with and did not show that the fuel was low. Walker said that when he landed here Saturday he had an adequate supply of gas.

In a telegram Tuesday to Willoughby, Walker said no blame was attached to Willoughby in connection with the incident. "You should be commended for your efforts to improve the airport," the message said.

Willoughby said he considered the statement that gasoline had been stolen from the plane was a reflection on him as he said he guarded the plane during the two nights it was on the local airfield. Willoughby said also that when Walker, who was piloting the plane, and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Phillips, also of Chicago, owners of the ship, prepared to take off Monday morning, two cylinders were missing and the plane consequently was underpowered. Willoughby also said that the lack of gas was due to rapid fuel consumption flying against a head wind from Springfield to Fayetteville and running of the motor on the airport for an hour and a half.

Operations between months made up most of the dealings as traders said the distants and bought July.

The president's bonus message for congress was the main subject discussed Wednesday.

Vote Is 328 to 98 for Inflationary Patman Measure

Issue Is Thus Placed Up to Senate Vote to Settle Measure

MESSAGE BY F. D. R. Leaders on Both Sides Agree Senate Will Support President

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Flaunting President Roosevelt's personal warning against the Patman two billion two hundred million dollar bonus bill would invite "disastrous consequences" the house Wednesday thundered its necessary two thirds to override his veto.

The issue is thus placed squarely up to the senate. There the administration is counting on a few votes margin to sustain the president.

Denouncing the bill as providing "deceptively easy method payment," the president said that it constituted an invitation to star prining presses with ultimate "sky rocking prices" and destructive savings. The house vote to override his veto was 328 to 98.

The president's position was said to be construed by some as indicating that he would not veto a plan whereby veterans could cash their certificates at current instead of full value.

The president acknowledged that payment would help consumer business, but said that the money would go right back into banks without helping heavy industries where increased activity would be more beneficial.

Veto Is Awaited
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Congress awaits President Roosevelt's message Wednesday vetoing the inflationary Patman bonus bill, confident it will serve as a sign for a new bonus legislation drive. Leaders on both sides agreed the veto would be sustained in the senate.

They regarded the contest over the Patman bill as a preliminary skirmish that might have an important influence on the future campaign for bonus and monetary legislation.

There was much talk of a compromise measure following word that President Roosevelt had said privately he would veto any bill for "full and immediate" payment.

Senator Robinson Speaks
Senator Long, Democrat, Louisiana, following objection by Senator Steiwer, Republican, Oregon, talked so long in attacking the administration on various fronts that he delayed action on the resolution for a joint session of the senate and house to hear a presidential address.

He in turn was so loudly attacked that the chamber was in an uproar.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, at first declined to disclose his plans in the face of Long's blocking tactics. At one point, after the Louisiana had refused to permit a vote, he said off the floor:

"Let's see how long he will continue to make an ass of himself."

Baby's Actions Reveal When It Is Sick

Nothing disturbs a home as much as the sudden illness of a child, and particularly of a baby. In the first place, the baby cannot express itself to let the mother know what is wrong. If the baby is sick, it usually cries or manifests its illness in ways different from its usual actions. There are certain changes that may take place which indicate illness that any mother can see. First of all is vomiting. Vomiting is not a natural way for a baby to act. Some babies vomit much easier than do others. They vomit if they are handled too roughly soon after eating. They vomit if they eat too fast, or they vomit if food does not agree with them.

As the baby gets a little older, it may vomit simply because it does not like the food or does not want to eat. This vomiting tends to be a habit. If it is understood and can be controlled, there is nothing to worry about, but persistent uncontrollable vomiting is something else again and means consultation with a doctor.

The ordinary baby is not drowsy. It is right to be drowsy. Any baby that a baby seems extremely drowsy any time that its eyes roll upward when it is disturbed, without attempting to fix the eyes on the source of the disturbance, the baby is likely to be sick.

Normally the baby is without fever. If the skin gets hot and dry, and if a thermometer placed in the rectum indicates that the temperature of the baby is above 99.6 or 100, something is wrong with the baby's mechanism and should be investigated.

Certain infectious diseases show themselves by the manner in which they affect motions of the limbs. If the baby holds the arm or leg in a certain position and cries whenever the arm or leg is moved from that position, a careful study is needed to find out whether one of the serious infectious diseases is beginning.

It is of course taken for granted that any mother will recognize the presence of convulsions, of a discharge from eyes, ear, or nose. Any mother will recognize abnormal excretions from the bowels, particularly of material that is fluid or of the wrong color or containing blood.

These are danger signals. Any time any of these symptoms appears, it is wise to call a doctor at once.

Rarely will a child get over such conditions without attention. In most cases the condition will tend to progress and get worse, and it may become fatal.

A BOOK A DAY

Here Are the Quins in Their Own Book—Camera History of Famous Sisters Is Fascinating

If you get a heart-warming thrill out of those pictures of the Dionne quintuplets—and if you don't, I'm sorry for your coldness of heart—you'll be glad to know that several dozens of these pictures have been assembled in book form.

The book is entitled "The Dionne Quintuplets Growing Up," and it is nothing less than a camera record of the first 18 months of life of these fantastically adorable little ladies from Canada.

The tale begins with a view of the quintuplets just two days after they arrived in the world—tiny, fragile little persons, their faces screwed up in helpless protest at being obliged to live.

Then, step by step, comes their slow development into round, healthy, smiling babies.

We find them, presently, taking a little interest in what goes on around them, getting their food from a spoon instead of a bottle, discovering their legs and having a high old time with them, giggling wisely at the camera, reaching out to grab what interests them, cutting teeth, and displaying all those other little tricks which mark a baby's transformation from a blob of squirming flesh into a personage.

A foreword by Fred S. Ferguson tells how, as words of King George V, the babies are protected from exploitation, and points out that the guardians' plans call for the eventual release of the girls.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Navton

It's Bully If Twins Are Alike, But Not If One Turns Bully.

I am not an authority on twins. All I know about them is that one birth out of a hundred is double, that twin-bearing is considered hereditary, and that there are different kinds of twins: those looking alike being called "identical," and the rest "the other kind," although, of course, there is a name for them, too.

Once in a while, however, the mother of a pair will come to me for advice. Why, I don't know. I try to please off usually.

The latest problem brought was that of the lady who had twin boys three years old—"the other kind," she explained. They do not look alike or act alike, as twins are supposed to do.

The reason twins act alike, by the way, is largely due to the fact that their environment and conditioning and experiences are identical, because even though they may look as much alike as two front teeth they can differ in disposition—and do.

Billy Bullies Bobby Well—this lady's little boys neither look nor act alike. She worried because Billy is a regular little scamp with an awful temper, selfish and dominating, while Bobby is afraid of everything, cries all the time and won't take his part.

So I said, "And, of course, Billy abuses Bobby?" "Yes."

"I thought it over. Are they together all the time?" "They were."

"Have you any way of separating them?" "I guess I could do so—for part of the time anyway. Of course, it's easier to keep their meals and naps and play-time the same."

"Could you possibly find an older boy or two for Billy to play with who won't give in to him? And a gentle child, even a little younger, for Bobby?" She thought it possible.

"You might try it," I explained, "if you don't want Bobby to lose all faith in himself. Anyway, suppose you had a twin that was always bulldozing you—somebody you were tied up with day and night? Wouldn't you feel like putting the world between you at the very first chance? Most twins are fond of their mates, and that's fortunate, but I feel sorry for the others that don't get along. There they are, tied for life, you might say. They can't even think alone in peace."

"Careful Handling Called For" "Then you mean it's best for twins to be separated sometimes?"

"Only judging by my own feelings. I would want to be alone occasionally, even if I adored by other half. If I didn't get along with her, I'd want to be away as much as possible. Especially if she dominated me."

"I think the boys are together too much," declared this lady thoughtfully. "Yes, that's it. I'm going to do more disciplining of Billy, too, and try to encourage Bob."

"Don't overdo it," I warned then. "Bobby will have to learn to take his part with Billy sometime. And if you punish Billy too much for abusing Bobby, he might learn to hate his brother. Be careful."

I wonder how they are doing.

Possible Effect of a Stock Market Boom

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel McEllicott © 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KATHARINE STRYKHURST, beautiful, 20, is restless and discontented with the useless round of social activities that make up her life. She rides only with MICHAEL HEATHEROE, who runs a riding club.

SALLY MOON, local coquette, also enrolls at the club for riding lessons.

ZOE PARKER, Katharine's friend, sent to Europe to forget a love affair with GRIBBS LATTICE, returns. She persists in seeing GIBBS in spite of her parents' objections.

Katharine, riding with Michael, is thrown from her horse. Shocked but not seriously injured, she is taken to the home of VIOLET MERSEY who years before was in love with Katharine's father. Mrs. Mersey feels drawn to the girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

ISABEL, the manicurist at Miss Betsy's Beauty Shoppe, bent so licitously over Katharine's hand. "Want them a little shorter, don't you?"

Katharine nodded. Sally Moon was in the next booth, with its rose colored curtains swinging between painted white posts. Katharine could hear Sally's laughter as she gossiped with Miss Betsy.

"Why have you got that string tied around your finger?" Katharine asked the little manicurist idly. Isabel, who had waved brown hair, plucked eyebrows and a confiding air, glanced up, dimpled and smiled.

"Bill put it there on my birthday," she confided. "Bill Chase—you know him, Miss Strykhurst. He drives the express truck. Big fellow with broad shoulders. I told him I'd keep it there till he put a sure enough ring on it. I say the craziest things," she finished with an innocent, upward sweep of mascaraed lashes. "I'm just a nut."

"You're going to marry him then?"

"Well, yes, I guess so. We were playing with the ouija board last week and I asked outja: 'When am I going to be married?' Well, will you believe it, Miss Strykhurst, that thing ran around to October 4? I was just about knocked silly. October 4. Imagine that!"

Katharine smiled. From the booth Sally Moon's high laughter sounded again.

"She's a very popular girl, I hear," Isabel murmured with a shrug in Sally's direction. "The men just go running."

"She's attractive," Katharine conceded, concealing her instinctive dislike with an effort.

"Well, but about Bill and myself," Isabel pursued, getting back to her favorite topic. "You know when I told him about ouija he acted funny, kind of. Said he didn't believe in monkeying with fate or something like that. Men are so sort of queer. It's like they had no intuition or something. Now take me, I always want to know about the future. Why, there was a fortune teller up at Playland and she had me down to a T. De-scribed my first beau and said I was going to get a letter and would you believe it..."

THERE was a good deal more of this, but Katharine did not hear it all. Sally Moon, a riot of sea-foam waves and escaping sausage curls, emerged presently from the booth, in the crispest of yellow silks with flyaway scarf. She met Katharine's eyes and both girls bowed rather stiffly.

"Gee, that's a pretty outfit," Isabel commented enviously as Sally glowered out of the door to take her place at the wheel of her waiting car. "Bet that cost plenty. That's what I always say. No wonder these girls have all the breaks, clothes and cars and all—tearing around like nobody's business. I don't mean you, of course, Miss Strykhurst," she finished briskly, at a warning nod from her employer who was putting the stopper on a mammoth bottle of liquid shampoo.

"Hear you took a tumble last week," Isabel went on after an interval during which polish was applied deftly to the nails of Katharine's left hand. "Read it in the paper. Gosh, I was all upset. Be-lieve it or not, I said to myself, Miss Strykhurst is the latest one of the whole bunch in town. It'll be a shame if she's going to be badly hurt."

"It wasn't anything," Katharine said. "But that tall fellow who comes down from the riding club, he sure is one good-looking chap," Isabel chattered.

Katharine said, "He's really very nice."

"Sally Moon thinks so," Isabel murmured with a glance over her shoulder. "She came in here one day last week for a set; she was just going on at a great rate about him. Gaga, I call it."

Katharine might have been entirely absorbed in examining her nails for all her expression told. "They look lovely. Thank you, Isabel," she tipped generously.

"Thank you, Miss Strykhurst. Oh, you oughtn't to—really you shouldn't. Although I won't say it won't come in handy. I'm saving for a new dress for the picnic next week. Bill hasn't asked me yet but I'm sure he will. The Elks' Club. He doesn't belong but his uncle does."

Life, thought Katharine, was comparatively simple for girls like Isabel. Doubtless she would marry her Bill in due time and settle down to a life of saving and babies and quarreling and making up. Isabel was frank in her adoration for the hulking young man who drove the express truck. Katharine knew that his reputation in Inticook was one of good. He had been in some sort of fight at one of the roadhouses the year before. He was a swaggering, bold-eyed young man, handsome in a crude way. Katharine told dimly that little Isabel, who lived in a shabby one story house over on the wrong side of the tracks, deserved something distinctly better than that. But Isabel wanted Bill—so it was really none of anyone's business, Katharine reminded herself.

SHE drove past the Mersey house slowly, hoping one of the children would be out in the yard. But the car was not in the drive and Katharine could see the turbaned head of the colored maid at one of the upper windows; rugs were being vigorously shaken.

Bertine had been inclined, as usual, to discourage any connection with the Merseys.

"They want to get in with the right crowd, that sort of people," Bertine had said in the assured tone that always irked Katharine. "Just be polite but don't encourage them."

Usually Katharine didn't bother to argue with her stepmother, but this time she had lifted her voice in protest.

"I don't think Violet Mersey wants to 'get in with' anyone," she said indignantly. "Why, she knows all sorts of people in the city who do important things—sculptors and writers and that sort of thing. Why on earth should she want to know any of us?"

"Thank you, Katharine, thank you very much," Bertine had said stiffly. "We all know what you think of Inticook. And yet I must remind you that some of the most splendid people, the finest names in the county, are here."

Bertine and gone on in this vein for some little time, and Katharine had listened with a mufous face. It was always like this, she reminded herself angrily. Whenever she found a friend of her own, whose pedigree had not been investigated from a to zard, Bertine would be sure to put in a meddling finger.

"I hate her," the girl decided, whirling her car recklessly around the corner of the River Road. She would go to see Mrs. Mersey again, no matter what her stepmother said! She had decided that.

THE barns and outbuildings of Michael's place were now in view, and Katharine's heart began to beat thickly, furiously. How stupid of her! She had been keeping at bay, all the week, the memory of Michael's visit in that little upper room at the Mersey house. She had been trying to tell herself that his mothered. "My darling!" had been the merest fragment of her imagination. But the sum of all this thought had been to make her extraordinarily self-conscious about seeing Michael again. Now the very memory of his slow, reluctant smile, the laughter wrinkles about the corners of his gray eyes seemed dim and far away. She clung to her remnants of dignity. She must not, by any possible chance, let Michael know she was attracted to him. He would despise her. Hadn't she read that, hadn't she been told by Bertine and others that men hated being pursued? Isabel, the little manicurist, could quite frankly suggest to her Bill that the playful circling of string be replaced by a plain band. But she was Katharine Strykhurst, cool and assured and self-sufficient. She could never, never let a man know that she cared for him. Until, of course, he spoke first...

And Michael Heatheroe was a nobody. Bertine would be sure to designate him as "an upper servant."

What was it John Kaye had said? "Don't let Bertine get your goat." But that was it. Bertine had dominated Katharine for years; it was hard to break the habit of obedience, of tacit submission to the older woman's will.

Katharine caught her breath. A man had ridden out of the lane. His crest of reddish hair gleamed in the sunlight. He wore breeches and an old blue jersey.

She had to step on the brakes rather suddenly. Michael rode up to the very side of the car.

Was there something quizzical in the look he now bent upon her? She strove for casualness and achieved it.

"The top of the morning to you," Michael said slyly. "Thank the good Lord you're whole and safe after that spill."

Katharine's heart settled down, like a homing bird in the nest, at the sound of the words.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Exercising Caution Is Healthy—Taking Things Easy First Week Urged

"I dread to see my daughter start on her vacation," writes a woman in Ohio. "She spends it each year at her aunt's summer home, but she always comes back more tired than when she left. Won't you advise girls how to get some physical benefit as well as mental relaxation from their summer holidays?"

I think this mother's fears are worthy of consideration. It really is too bad that so many girls fail to get the most out of their vacations. It's possible to have a marvelous time and still build up a little health of see you through the rest of the summer and the fall ahead.

First of all, plan to get 12 hours sleep the first night after you arrive at resort or farm. After that, arrange your schedule in such a way as to allow yourself eight hours rest a day. If you dance until three, then sleep from four until noon the next day. It's silly to dance all night and then get up at nine to play golf.

If you haven't been swimming regularly in pool, don't overdo the first few times you go bathing. Play around in the water, but don't attempt any races or endurance tests. The same applies to tennis and golf. Be a little lazy. After all, you're on vacation and there's no reason to rush through one athletic contest after another until you are exhausted.

For the first week, don't take sunshine in enormous doses. And remember to put on suntan lotion whenever you go to the beach. In addition, take time for a few simple beauty treatments. Making your skin and hair more lovely is one excellent way to spend part of your holiday.

NEXT: Feet comfort.

No Chances

A Georgia farmer sat barefooted on the steps of his tumble-down shack, smoking a corn-cob pipe. A stranger stopped for a drink of water. "How is your cotton coming on?" asked the newcomer.

"Ain't got none," said the cracker. "Didn't you plant any?"

"Nope, 'fraid of boll weevils." "Well, how is your corn?"

"Didn't plant none." "Fraid there wasn't going to be no rain?"

The visitor was abashed, but cheerful still. "Well, how are your potatoes?"

"Ain't got none," said the cracker. "Didn't you plant any?"

Saturday's PAY DAY

Hope Star
Carrier Boys

Hope Star now employs 15 carrier boys. Each boy is his own merchant and should be paid each Saturday when he calls, as he is required to settle each Saturday night in full with the Hope Star for the papers he receives.

Carriers should not be expected to make repeated calls for collections, when the amount is so small, as the large number of deliveries they make, and the amount of time required in collecting from their customers does not permit this.

Hope Star deeply appreciates the patronage of every customer, and hopes they will be willing to make it a point to have the 10 cents ready for the carrier when he makes his first call.

Any failure on the part of the subscriber to pay is a direct loss to the young man. Although the amount is small in each individual case, very many such delays and losses could be a serious matter to the carrier that serves you.

bank governors, representing private bankers, and give it—with power to initiate and enforce—to the presidentially appointed Federal Reserve Board, which now has only a veto power over those operations.

Open market operations are simply these in which the 12 regional Federal Reserve banks deal in government bonds with the thousands of member banks of the Federal Reserve System.

Purchase by the reserve banks increases bank reserves, providing member banks with more funds. Sale to member banks decreases their reserves.

Boom Can Be Curbed
The theory is that credit expands when reserves are increased and that recovery follows whenever business is willing to borrow. But if a dangerous speculative boom threatens, regional banks can sell bonds to member banks in order to withdraw funds from the market.

Col. A. E. Williams Faces Army Court

Secrecy Shrouds Trial Resulting From War Department Contracts

WASHINGTON.—Despite the wartime secrecy concerning the identity of the officer on trial before an army court-martial here, it was learned Wednesday that he is Col. Alexander E. Williams, veteran of both the Spanish-American and World wars, and until recently chief of the transportation division of the Quartermaster Corps with the rank of brigadier general.

The trial is said to be the culmination of the two-year investigation into the $10,000,000 contracts awarded in mechanizing and motorizing the army.

These have been the subject of a closed hearing by the House Military Affairs Committee, and an inquiry by a District of Columbia Grand Jury. All the evidence has been put at the disposal of the court-martial. It ramifies into many phases of political and official life, and includes the names of those high in the councils of the Roosevelt administration.

Colonel Williams is defended by the law firm of A. Mitchell Palmer, former United States attorney general, and his prosecutor is Maj. F. G. Munson of the judge advocate general's office. The court consists entirely of major generals. They are Fox Connor, Denis E. Nolan, Robert E. Callan, George Van Horn Moseley, Frank Parker, Frank H. McCoy, Stuart Heintzleman, Johnson Hagood and Paul B. Malone.

Held After Five of Family Die

Five deaths in his family in a month led to arrest of Frederick Gross, 49, above, $20-a-week bookkeeper for a New York City chemical firm.

His family denied knowledge of how his wife and four children met their deaths, after thallium sulphate was found in tissues of the mother and one child. A homicide charge has been filed against Gross.

This year meat is high, and so it behooves every one of us to use every scrap of meat to get the utmost of food value.

The initial meat cost per pound is determined by supply and demand and naturally is out of control of the home-maker. But the cost of waste due to thoughtless cooking is the cook's responsibility.

Porterhouse steak is an example of thoughtless waste in many households because it seldom is cooked to give it its full value. Aside from the waste in bone and fat, the tail is usually overcooked and uneatable.

Has Fine Flavor

Yet it has a fine flavor and if properly cooked is just as desirable as the tenderloin.

Try trimming the meat from the fat and put the pieces of lean "tail" meat through the food chopper twice. Season with 1/4 teaspoon salt and a few

Tomorrow's Menu
Breakfast: Unhulled strawberries, cereal, cream potato omelet, bran muffins, milk, coffee.
Luncheon: Cream of asparagus soup, croquettes, sandwiches filled with marmalade and nuts, sliced bananas in cherry gelatine, lemonade.
Dinner: Porterhouse steak, new potatoes in cream sauce, buttered green beans, cucumber and lettuce salad, apple sauce, ginger bread, milk, coffee.

One vegetable is served with milk in order to add milk to the menu. If you prefer baked potatoes or French fried potatoes with the steak then serve the beans in a thin cream sauce.

grains of pepper. Mix with a few dried bread crumbs and add one or two tablespoons milk. Stir lightly with a fork until thoroughly mixed and shape in a small cake the thickness of the steak.

Fit the cake into the side of the steak where it came from and bring the fatty end of the tail around it. Run a skewer through the fat and meat cake into the loin of the steak to hold it securely. Broil as usual. Remove skewer after steak is on platter and before sending to the table.

French Lamb Chops
Rib lamb chops are cheaper than loin but they too, may be served just as attractively if boned and rolled. Ask your butcher to French the chops for you. To do this he will scrape the meat from the bone. Then you can disjoint the rib from the bit of backbone and curl the meaty end back against the eye of the chop. Fasten with a skewer to keep it in shape during cooking. Broil as usual and remove skewer before serving.

"Somebody to see you"

If everybody with something to interest you should come and ring your bell, what a nuisance it would be! Think of the swarming, jostling crowd, the stamping of feet on your porch and carpets!

Every day we know of many callers who come to see you. They never jangle the bell—they don't take up your whole day trying to get your attention. Instead, they do it in way that is most considerate of your privacy and your convenience. They advertise in your newspaper!

In this way you have only to listen to those you know at a glance have something that interests you. They make it short, too, so you can gather quickly just what you want to know. You can receive and hear them all without noise or confusion in a very few minutes.

In fairness to yourself look over all the advertisements. The smallest and the largest—you never can be sure which one will tell something you really want to know.
